

SEMINAR SERIES:

Leadership in Focus

Session 1: Leadership Skills

Join us for the Wake Forest Clinical and Translational Science Institute (CTSI) Workforce Development Team’s new seminar series, Leadership in Focus! This engaging virtual series is designed to enhance your leadership skills and expose effective strategies through insightful interviews with leaders who will share their real-world experience. These sessions are perfect for anyone looking to develop their leadership abilities, whether you’re new to leadership roles or a seasoned professional aiming to refine your approach. Don’t miss this opportunity to elevate your game by learning from leaders across the enterprise!

Each in-depth interview will be facilitated by Dr. Amy Wallis, a Professor of Practice in Organizational Behavior and Ethics at the Wake Forest University School of Business. Dr. Wallis will engage research experts about their own experiences, challenges, and solutions in leadership - including growing one’s leadership capacity, strategic leadership, and leading change. There will be one session each in March, April, and May, with three more sessions coming in Fall 2025. Keep an eye out for these exciting opportunities!

•••

 Wednesday, March 19th

 Noon - 1PM ET

 Virtual

Register to Attend

The first session of Leadership in Focus will occur during the Biostatistics, Epidemiology, and Research Design (BERD) Lunch and Learn on Wednesday, March 19th from Noon to 1PM ET. Dr. Jamy Ard, Professor and Vice Dean for Clinical Research at Wake Forest University School of Medicine, will discuss his own leadership experiences in conversation with Dr. Wallis.

Speakers:

Dr. Jamy Ard
Professor, Epidemiology and Prevention,
Wake Forest University School of Medicine

Dr. Amy Wallis (Host)
Professor, Organizational Behavior
Wake Forest University School of Business