

Carolinas Medical Center-Union

In 1918, Ellen Fitzgerald Hospital, an 18-bed facility, first opened to serve the residents of Union County, North Carolina. It was operated by Alto Freed Mahoney, MD, a young surgeon who took great pride in never turning away any individual who needed medical attention. In 1953, after several decades of significant growth, Union Memorial Hospital opened on the Ellen Fitzgerald site. Union Memorial joined Carolinas HealthCare System in 1995, a milestone that led to numerous renovations and upgrades; and, in 2005, the hospital changed its name to Carolinas Medical Center-Union.

CMC-Union offers a comprehensive array of services, including a day surgery center, cancer treatment center, a long-term care facility, a behavioral health center, outpatient specialty care clinics, home health services, a community wellness and outreach program, and numerous physician practices. The hospital also includes an accredited Chest Pain Center and Newborn Special Care Nursery staffed by board-certified neonatologists who monitor babies with special needs around the clock.

Over the years, CMC-Union has received numerous national quality awards and recognitions, and was recently recognized for service excellence under the J.D. Power and Associates Distinguished Hospital ProgramSM. This distinction acknowledges a strong commitment by CMC-Union to provide an outstanding inpatient, maternity and emergency experience. CMC-Union has also earned a place on Carolina Parent magazine's annual list of the "Top 50 Family-Friendly Employers in North Carolina" several times.

CMC-Union's many improvements and outreach efforts mean the highest quality care is available in Union County. Our uncompromising excellence and commitment to care give patients more of everything. It's who we are at CMC-Union.
